DIMITRIS YEROS

Dimitris Yeros will present 30 works executed in Greece and America over the last 27 years. These are small and large aquarelles on paper characterised by a detailed realistic script. All the works are in colour since they come from earlier periods in his work, unlike the monochrome works he exhibited in Athens three years ago, causing a stir with their subject matter. Most of the works in the exhibition feature his trademark little man that is partly an alter ego of the surrealist artist himself, incessantly moving between the real and the metaphysical and relating the problems faced by contemporary man in an enigmatic critical spirit and with an awakening consciousness.

At the same time the artist's ecological sensibility, in these as in his earlier works, remains strikingly prophetic. Hills, vast landscapes, birds, trees spermatozoa-like clouds, blots and volcanoes coexist in order to produce what surrealists call a "Divine Trick".

The well-known American art critic Dominique Nahas writes in the exhibition catalogue: Dimitris Yeros favors images that engage all of our senses. Such imagery, mediated by happenstance and reverie, is a poetic as well as a reconciling force. Through it the artist comes to terms with the world by using an imaginative project that expands into personal and universal dimensions. Within his vision the artist finds surprising poetic relationships between the subject and the content. In doing so the practice of art for Yeros is a means and an end for self-renewal through self-revelation. For the viewer the art of Dimitris Yeros could best be viewed as cultural gifts with long-lasting effects. Such art enriches this world by offering it a different, yet unique, vision of enchantment and contemplation.

The next exhibition of Dimitris Yeros is to take place at the Throckmorton Fine Arts of New York between early June and late September, where the famous artist will display the black-and-white photos he has shot on Lesbos in the last 35 years; it is to feature landscapes, scenes with people and nudes photographed at various spots around the island.

In November he is to exhibit the black-and-white photos he took in Egypt twenty years ago at the Tintera Gallery in Cairo, and in December he will exhibit new paintings at the Kapatais Gallery in Nicosia.

The exhibition at Ikastikos Kiklos DL will be open on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 11.00 to 20.00, Wednesdays and Saturdays from 11.00 to 16.00.
